

Abstract Of The Disclosure

In a window-integrated antenna in vehicles, the heating conductor field is used for FM reception as well as for LMS reception. At least one decoupling element is provided for LMS reception which has a high-frequency, but non-galvanic connection to the heating conductor field. The decoupling element is situated in the heating conductor field, in particular between two adjacent heating conductors.